CMU and SCTC field school conduct research at Stonehouse for connection to boarding school

As part of the program for this year's virtual Honoring, Healing and Remembering event to honor the anniversary of the closing of the Mt. Pleasant Indian Industrial Boarding School on June 4, Dr. Sarah Surface-Evans of Central Michigan University's Archeological Field School shared findings on the Asinii Waa'kaa'igan (Pego-Pelcher Stonehouse) and its connection to the boarding school.

The Stonehouse was built in the 1890s and given to Lenora Pelcher to live in when her husband James Pego died at a young age, according to Surface-Evans' research after speaking with Faith Carmona-Pego and the Pego-Pelcher family.

Archeological efforts begin at the Asinii Waa'kaa'igan (Stonehouse), to research its connection to the Mt. Pleasant Indian Industrial Boarding School.

"The Pego-Pelcher farmstead began when Mariah Pelcher was allotted 40 acres in November 1885," Surface-Evans said. "She later sold two acres to the Ann Arbor Railroad which runs along the eastern side of property. Mariah and her husband, Moses, and their children made a home there, and their descendants lived there the last 136 years."

The Mt. Pleasant Indian Industrial Boarding School, or MIIBS, opened just as the Pelchers started their family.

"Their children were forced to attend the boarding school," Surface-Evans said. "Their son (Ulysses Pelcher) tragically died at the school at age 7 (in 1906). (Daughter) Lenora and James' son Henry died at the school at age 5 (in 1927)."

The Pego-Pelcher family reported that they assisted children running away from the boarding school. These children used their barn as a safe haven, briefly stopping there before catching the train to return home.

"The Pego-Pelcher family actively recruited MIIBS boys from the outing program in the summer months, having them work their farm in order to protect them from abuse elsewhere with white families," Surface-Evans said.

Because of this significant history, a grant from the National Park Service was obtained to conduct research on the site and to learn more about its connections to MIIBS. Collaborating for this research includes: the Saginaw Chippewa Indian Tribe, the Ziibiwing Center, Saginaw Chippewa Tribal College and Central Michigan University.

The grant covers three different aspects of research: professional survey of the land, architectural evaluation of the homestead, and the archeological evaluation of the farm.

"To gather the material remains that tell a story of the Pego-Pelcher family and the connection to MIIBS, we are developing an approach that helps to identify and document

More than 250 attendees virtually join SCIT for third annual Tribal Opioid Summit

JOSEPH V. SOWMICK

Healing to Wellness
Court Coordinator

The Saginaw Chippewa Indian Tribe welcomed more than 250 online attendees and hosted the third annual (virtual) Tribal Opioid Summit on June 9, 2021.

Tribal Court Senior Judge Patrick Shannon provided some introductory remarks after Tribal Council Chaplain Alice Jo Ricketts began in prayer and Tribal Council Secretary Jennifer Wassegijig welcomed the attendees.

Shannon said this year's theme was "Finding Solutions That Work" and he focused on some of the obstacles the committee faced but the results were successful.

"It was wonderful to have Dr. Nicholas Haddad as a lead keynote to begin the summit, and he is an infectious disease specialist with more than 20 years of experience in practicing adult medicine," Shannon said. "Dr. Haddad has led coronavirus infection control efforts for the Central Michigan University community, in Saginaw for patient care clinics, hospitals and our workplaces."

Haddad works with the CMU College of Medicine.

"He targeted the effects of infectious disease on our clients, not only COVID-19, but the effects and spread of hepatitis and HIV were covered in most of the presentations," Shannon said.

The summit moved from the opening keynote to two tracks of workshops.

Track one featured "Integrative Justice: A Healthcare Approach for Treatment Courts" with Shannon and "Technological Advances of Telemedicine and Telehealth during a Pandemic" with Sethu Reddy, MD, CMU College of Medicine.

Track two featured "Challenges of Managing Opioid Use Disorder during the Pandemic - Where are we at?" with Thersilla Oberbarnscheidt, MD, Ph.D., University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine and "Mental Health Diagnosis and Treatment during a Pandemic" with Dr. Cara Poland, MD, Michigan State University College of Medicine.

Poland is a board-certified physician specializing in addiction medicine and works as a consultant with the Tribal Court's Healing to Wellness Program and Nimkee Memorial Wellness Center.

Public Service Announcement

The Saginaw Chippewa Indian Tribe strives to provide a warm and welcoming environment for all of its Members and their families to grow, develop, and thrive. Many times we find ourselves celebrating our culture and traditional ways in an open setting with other fellow Tribal Members. Activities such as drumming, singing and dancing are a few examples of how we can practice, share, and teach our traditional ways. When this is done in a respectful and productive way, it acts to strengthen our community and should be celebrated. This is in no way community disturbance or nuisance and should be supported and enjoyed, not discouraged. Let's continue to take care of one another and check-in on your elders often.

Attention SCIT Tribal Members of all ages:

Tribal Council would like your assistance with naming the New Tribal Academy slated for construction early spring of 2021. The road connecting the school to Broadway and East Remus had been constructed in 2020 and remains unnamed. Any suggestions you have for the road would be appreciated as well.

There has been much speculation in and around the community about the removal of the General Council Meeting video from Tuesday, June 1, 2021.

Tribal Council was made aware that the video had been taped in YouTube format which makes it readily available to be shared and copied to non-members. It had been removed to decrease the threat of proprietary information being shared outside of our Tribal community.

Your leadership has been working with our Information Technologies department to ensure any further video communication with you the membership is secure and safe from duplication.

Take care of yourselves and each other. Please check on your elders often.

37th Annual Saginaw Chippewa POWOW July 23 - 25, 2021

UNDERSTANDING THE PATH

— A list of powwow guidelines from the SCIT Powwow Committee —

- 1. Be on time. The SCIT Powwow Committee is doing everything possible to ensure that activities begin and run smoothly. Please cooperate in this regard.
- 2. Appropriate dress and behavior are required in the arena. Anyone unwilling to abide by this rule will be asked to leave by the arena director. (If you are going to dance, try to wear dance clothes.)
- 3. Pointing with fingers is considered poor manners by some nations. If you must point, use your head and nod in the direction you wish to indicate.
- 4. The seating around the arena is reserved for dancers in regalia. Seats with blankets, shawls or regalia items on them are taken and should not be bothered. Do NOT sit on someone else's blanket unless invited. Uncovered seats are considered available.
- 5. No pets allowed; they should be left at home. The arena is a sacred place from the time it is blessed until the powwow is over. At no time should pets be allowed in the arena.
- 6. Respect the head male and female dancers. Their role entitles them to start each song or set of songs. Please wait until they have started to dance before you join in. In some traditions, it is considered improper to pass the head male or female dancer within the arena.
- 7. Some songs require you to be familiar with the routine or have special eligibility rules in order to participate. Trot dances, snake, buffalo, etc. require particular steps or routines. Veteran dances may be restricted to veterans, combat veterans or, in some cases, the relations of veterans. If you are not familiar with a particular dance, observe and learn. Watch the head dancers to learn the procedures.
- 8. Most powwows are nonprofit and depend upon donations, raffles, blanket dances, etc. for support. Donations are encouraged as a way to honor someone. Any participant can drop money onto the blanket to aid with the powwow expenses.
- 9. Certain items of religious significance should be worn only by those qualified to do so. Respect the traditions. Never intentionally touch another dancer's regalia, personal property without permission.
- 10. Giveaways, attributes of Indian generosity, are held at many dances. They are acknowledgments of appreciation to recipients for honor or service given to the people. When receiving a gift, the recipient thanks everyone involved in the giving.
- 11. If you wish to ask for a special song from a drum, talk to the arena director first and make sure the master of ceremonies is informed. It is traditional to make a gift (monetary or otherwise) to the drum for special requests.
- 12. Before sitting at a drum, ask permission from the head singer. Do not touch a drum without permission. The drums are sacred, and it is believed that anyone who takes a place behind the drums has been selected by the Creator to be there. No one drums without special permission, and no one sits in the drumming area without special permission. Great offense is taken if you choose to sit in this area. You should never turn down an invitation by anyone, especially elders, during a powwow.
- 13. Ask permission before taking pictures of dancers. Pictures may be taken with the permission of the dancers but not during dedication dances (veterans songs, flag songs or prayers). These special songs will be announced by the emcee. Under no circumstances may you enter the arena to take photos.
- 14. If at any time you are uncertain of procedure, etc., please check with the emcee, arena director or head singer. They will be glad to help you with your questions.
- 15. Unless you are sure spectator seating will be provided, bring a chair. Remember that the seating immediately around the arena is for dancers only.
- 16. Be aware that someone standing behind you may not be able to see over you. Make room, step aside, sit or kneel if someone is behind you.
- 17. Alcohol, recreational drugs and firearms are prohibited at all powwows.
- 18. If you see a lost feather, or you yourself drop a feather, do not pick it up. Notify the nearest veteran, the head veteran, head male dancer or arena director immediately.
- 19. In some places it is okay for adults to dance while carrying infants or small children. In other places this is considered contrary to local etiquette. Ask before doing so.
- 20. Always stand during special songs. This includes grand entry, flag songs, veteran songs, memorial songs, prayer songs or any other song that the emcee designates. It is also customary to remove hats for the duration of that song.
- 21. Always listen to the emcee. He will give all of the information you need as well as entertain you and keep you posted about news. Any questions you have can be answered by him. He will let you know when you need to stand and when you may sit after honor songs. He will also announce intertribal dances and other invitations for guests to participate.
- 22. Supervise your children so that all may enjoy the event without distraction.
- 23. If you have a question, ask. Most dancers, singers, elders and staff are happy to help. Offer a cold drink or other small, symbolic gifts to those who help you.

A QUICK GUIDE TO THE SIX MAIN OJIBWE DANCING STYLES

Women's Jingle

This dance is aptly named for the tin cones (jingles) that cover the dancer's dress literally from head to foot. The movements of the dance are bouncy and energetic so that the jingling of the dresses matches the beat of the drum and provides a constant rhythmical accompaniment to each song. To be a jingle dress dancer, you must have dreamt about being one. With each step that these dancers are taking, they are praying for a sick friend or relative. The dress is made of cloth and has hundreds of cones attached, usually 365. Each one represents a prayer for each day of the year. When she dances, she uses her fan in a sweeping motion to wave away sickness.

Men's Fancy

Fancy dancing is easy recognizable by its rapid tempo and its colorful and distinctive regalia. Dancers' regalia features two very large, vividly colored double bustles, which are worn on the dancer's back. Smaller bustles may also be worn on the arms as well as brightly colored bead work and accessories. These men are undoubtedly some of the most energetic of all the powwow dancers. Their steps are quick but graceful with a high-powered twist.

Fancy Shawl Dance

The outstanding feature of these dancers' outfits is the graceful, brightly-fringed shawls that drape the young women's shoulders. They are a perfect compliment to the twirling, prancing, pirouetting steps of this showy, high-spirited dance. The word fancy refers to the footwork, not the shawl. The dress and decorative beaded accessories are vividly colorful and match the flaring shawls. The dance represents the life of the butterfly. This exuberant and delightful dance is undoubtedly the flashiest of the women's dancing styles.

Men's Grass

This dance style is also easy to recognize by the striking regalia, with dancers covered shoulder to ankle in long, thick flows of bright, multicolored cloth fringe. Men's grass dancing symbolizes the young men of western tribes who were to stomp down the tall grass of the plains so the people could use the area. The long fringe represents the grass. The long, flowing yarn fringe originally started out as sweet grass hung from their regalia. In modern times, yarn is used. The dance movements are also distinctive for their sliding, shaking and spinning motion, rather than the high, kicking steps of the fancy dancer.

Women's Traditional

These women dance in a sedate and stately manner. They may move slowly about the circle of the arena but often will simply stand in the same place, rhythmically dipping and swaying to the beat of the drummers. Their outfits are often heavily and elaborately decorated with beadwork and sometimes porcupine quills, elk ivory and cowry shells. The dresses themselves may be sewn of buckskin leather or of various types of fabric. Their colors tend to be somewhat gentler and subdued than those of other woman's dance styles.

Men's Traditional

Traditional dancing is an opportunity for men to dance in the way of their fathers and grandfathers. A traditional dancer's regalia is much more likely to reflect tribal affiliation than those of the other men's dance styles. The dancer's ensemble may frequently include pieces handed down for generations within the family and may range from a look of dignified simplicity to dramatically elaborate. The dance style is similar to the outfit itself—elaborate, expressive and powerful but not as flashy and exuberant as the other men's styles.

Tribal Court hangs plaque dedicated to first SCIT magistrate

NATALIE SHATTUCK

Editor

A plaque now hangs at the Tribal Courtroom doors to honor the first Tribal Magistrate Nicki Perez.

A short dedication ceremony was held on Monday, June 7 after 11:30 a.m. to honor the late Nicki Perez with Court staff and Perez's family gathered near the Courtroom doors.

Healing to Wellness Court Coordinator Joseph Sowmick provided a few words of welcome.

"We say the words Osh-Kah-Gii-Shi-Giick, and Osh-Kah-Gii-Shi-Giick is the promise of a new day," Sowmick said. "There was a promise of a new day that happened right here in this building in 1995 when this building was constructed."

The Tribal Court originally began in the small rooms of the former Tribal Observer offices in the Tribal Operations building. Part of the dedication to Perez was paying homage to her commencement of the Tribal Court and its eventual expansion.

Senior Judge Patrick Shannon said the SCIT Tribal Court neither began with its own building nor its own courtroom.

"It was all based upon this concept of sovereignty and ability to self-regulate through your courts and also through your tribal councils," Shannon said. "It wasn't until the latter part of the last century, the 1970s, there was a recognition of tribal courts. It's been a slow, onward, approach and now you control it: set your own codes, enforce your own civil codes and you have a court to do it in. You have to recognize the importance of this; this is a cornerstone of your sovereignty."

Courtesy of Joseph Sowmick

Shannon said 50 years ago, the employees of Healing to Wellness would have worked through the Isabella County Court, now the Saginaw Chippewa Court has its own.

"It all comes back to people like Nicki Perez who were the foundation of the exertion of sovereignty in their own community," Shannon said.

The judge and Sowmick presented the plaque to the family that states: "In loving memory of Nicki Perez.

In recognition of Dedicated Service and Support as the first Saginaw Chippewa Tribal Court Magistrate 1983 to 1992 at Saginaw Chippewa Tribal Operations 7070 East Broadway, Mt. Pleasant, MI."

Perez's daughter, Mary Perez, spoke a few words on behalf of the family. She said she remembers her mother having to get up and go to work in the middle of the night and recalled her mom having to attend several trainings in Sault Ste. Marie.

"I remember my mom worked for $5 an hour and we thought that was so awesome because back then you would barely get $3 minimum wage," Mary Perez said.

Ziibiwing Center Researcher Anita Heard found a Tribal Council motion dated Feb. 7, 1983 where it stated Nicki Perez's title was clerk/magistrate with more allocated hours for her to work. She maintained the magistrate title from then until 1992.

Demonstrators demand justice in slaying of Indigenous woman

About 200 people demonstrated in front of the federal courthouse in Detroit on Tuesday, June 22, demanding justice for the killing of an Indigenous woman in November 2020.

Nangonhs-Ba Massey, a citizen of the Little Traverse Bay Bands of Odawa Indians, was fatally stabbed at an apartment complex in Mount Pleasant. Kaden E. Gilbert, 20, was arraigned last November in U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan on counts of first-degree murder, assault with a dangerous weapon and assault causing serious bodily harm.

The demonstration in front of the courthouse was planned to take place on the day Gilbert was scheduled to appear but the case was delayed until August.

"This isn't the first time that this has happened in Indian Country where a young woman went missing or murdered, and the investigation process or the justice system is never adequate," said Melissa Pamp, Massey's mother.

Carrie Heron, a friend of Massey and her family, says Gilbert should serve federal time.

"Kaden Gilbert... is white. And because she killed a Native American on the Reservation, she's supposed to serve federal time. It's a federal crime," she said.

Massey was killed in November, and it's rare to go this long without an indictment. The latest hold-up is more crime lab DNA reports, which both prosecutors and the defense have to review.

Meanwhile, a family grieves and seeks justice.

The family of Nangonhs-Ba Massey protests at the federal courthouse in Detroit on June 22 demanding justice for Massey's fatal stabbing in November 2020.

"She was a shining star. And she was just starting to really blossom," said Miengun Pamp, Massey's father.

The U.S. Department of Justice says Indigenous women are murdered at more than 10 times the national average.

"She was 21 years old. And the third leading cause of Native American women's death is homicide. So it's a bigger issue than that," Pamp said.

Secretary Haaland announces Federal Indian Boarding School Initiative

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF INTERIOR

WASHINGTON — In remarks to the National Congress of American Indians 2021 Mid Year Conference last month, Secretary of the Interior Deb Haaland announced a Federal Indian Boarding School Initiative, a comprehensive review of the troubled legacy of federal boarding school policies.

The announcement is accompanied by a secretarial memo in which Secretary Haaland directs the Department to prepare a report detailing available historical records, with an emphasis on cemeteries or potential burial sites, relating to the federal boarding school program in preparation for a future site work.

This work will occur under the supervision of the assistant secretary for Indian Affairs.

“The Interior Department will address the inter-generational impact of Indian boarding schools to shed light on the unspoken traumas of the past, no matter how hard it will be,” Secretary Haaland said. “I know that this process will be long and difficult. I know that this process will be painful. It won’t undo the heartbreak and loss we feel. But only by acknowledging the past can we work toward a future that we’re all proud to embrace.”

Secretary Haaland recently reflected on the inter-generational trauma created by these policies in an op-ed.

“We must shed light on what happened at federal boarding schools,” said Bryan Newland, principal deputy assistant secretary for Indian Affairs, who also delivered remarks outlining implementation of this effort. “As we move forward in this work, we will engage in tribal consultation on how best to use this information, protect burial sites, and respect families and communities.”

Beginning with the Indian Civilization Act of 1819, the United States enacted laws and implemented policies establishing and supporting Indian boarding schools across the nation.

The purpose of Indian boarding schools was to culturally assimilate Indigenous children by forcibly relocating them from their families and communities to distant residential facilities where their American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian identities, languages, and beliefs were to be forcibly suppressed.

For more than 150 years, hundreds of thousands of Indigenous children were taken from their communities.

The Federal Indian Boarding

School Initiative will serve as an investigation about the loss of human life and the lasting consequences of residential Indian boarding schools. The primary goal will be to identify boarding school facilities and sites; the location of known and possible student burial sites located at or near school facilities; and the identities and tribal affiliations of children interred at such locations.

The recent discovery of 215 unmarked graves by Canada’s Tk’emlúps te Secwepemc First Nation at the Kamloops Indian Residential School prompted the Department to undertake this new initiative with the goal of shedding light on these past traumas.

The work will proceed in several phases and include the identification and collection of records and information related to the Department of Interior’s own oversight and implementation of the Indian boarding school program; formal consultations with Tribal Nations, Alaska Native corporations, and Native Hawaiian organizations to clarify the processes and procedures for protecting identified burial sites and associated information; and the submission of a final written report on the investigation to the Secretary by April 1, 2022.

The Interior Department continues to operate residential boarding schools through the Bureau of Indian Education. In sharp contrast to the policies of the past, these schools aim to provide a quality education to students from across Indian Country and to empower Indigenous youth to better themselves and their communities as they seek to practice their spirituality, learn their language, and carry their culture forward.

Sign created for sacred fire wood at campground

MARCELLA HADDEN

Tribal Historic Preservation Officer

Eric Phipps (photographed left in the photo to the right), of the Soaring Eagle Carpenter Shop, designed a Sacred Fire Wood sign as requested by the Mt. Pleasant Indian Industrial Boarding School Committee (MIIBS).

Phipps is pictured by the sign on May 25, 2021 with Steven Shaydik (right), who assisted in hanging it, at the Saginaw Chippewa Indian Campground (also known as The Hill or powwow grounds).

The wood was cut from the MIIBS property earlier this year. Tribal Council approved to have the trees cut as they were dead and dangerous. The trees are considered “witness trees” because they have witnessed a lot of what happened on the MIIBS property throughout the years.

The SCIT Fire Department Wild Land Crew will be cutting the wood into smaller pieces. The wood can now be used for sacred fires (especially when a loved one passes) and the community can help themselves to it.

Traditionally, fires are used to help a loved one on their journey to the spirit world and burns for four days. This wood can now be used in a good and respectful manner and help carry prayers to the Creator.

If you would like to donate wood for fires, please do so. We are hoping to keep this as a community function.

Virtual 2021 Honoring, Healing & Remembering recognizes 87th anniversary of Mt. Pleasant boarding school closing

NATALIE SHATTUCK

Editor

As the Saginaw Chippewa Indian Tribe prepared for its annual Honoring, Healing & Remembering event, a day of honoring the closing of the Mt. Pleasant Indian Industrial Boarding School “MIIBS,” the Tk’emlúps to Secwépemc community of British Columbia, Canada mourned 215 individuals discovered on the grounds of the former Kamloops Indian Residential School.

“We are painfully awakened again to the shameful legacy of the American Indian Boarding School and the Canadian Indian Residential School era,” the SCIT Public Relations Department said in a June 3 statement.

The 2021 virtual Honoring, Healing & Remembering “HHR” event recognized the 87th anniversary of the MIIBS’s closing, and recognized the suffering, strength and resilience of approximately 227 students that perished while attending the school.

This year’s virtual event was live on YouTube on Friday, June 4, beginning at 10 a.m.

On behalf of Tribal Council, Sub-Chief Joe Kequom provided a welcome, live in the Council chambers.

“Let us not forget the school was not only for the Saginaw Chippewa Indian Tribe but for Indian people around Michigan and in the country,” Kequom said of MIIBS. “Let us not forget the school whose purpose was to remove tribal identity and spirit. Eighty-seven years ago, the suffering was diminished.”

Live at the Zibiwing Center, the City of Mount Pleasant Mayor Will Joseph and City Manager Nancy Ridley both provided statements.

“It is vital to our community and mankind to stop and think about our past, to realize how far we’ve come, how much work is still to be done and to be mindful of the experiences of others,” Joseph said. “The abuse Native Americans have suffered in our history has been horrific. The legacy still unravels today. This is why we must remember the annual Honoring, Healing &

Remembering event that brings song, dance, food, language, jingle of the dance, that was once forbidden and attempted to be erased, and today is a testament to the strength of the spirit of the survivors and the descendants.”

The mayor continued, “In this way, we recognize the pain and take, from that energy – that gut-wrenching energy – we feel and put it towards our future – a celebration of identity and harmony that is pursued every day. Honoring, healing and remembering is important to be aware of our past, but also celebrate our present and future, and recognize how our community is working together; building personal relationships.”

City Manager Nancy Ridley has attended several HHR events throughout the years, and, she said, two things in particular always stand out to her: the sunrise ceremony at the cemetery and the student roll call of the deceased students’ names.

“It just isn’t possible to be a part of those activities and not recognize some of the suffering that undoubtedly occurred throughout Tribal families,” Ridley said, remembering when the boarding school era was not addressed. “I’m proud of our community of Mount Pleasant for listening to Tribal Members through the years to expand our understanding of the Mount Pleasant community of what actually occurred and impacts it still has today of some Tribal Members and their families.”

William Johnson, interim director for the Zibiwing Center, prerecorded an address from the Mission Creek Cemetery.

“In 1850, the Methodist Episcopal Indian Church established the Bradley Indian Mission Cemetery, we are (recording) in the Mission Creek Cemetery, and this was established in 1850 and was active until 1860,” Johnson said in the video.

Johnson continued, “There are some notable Saginaw Chippewa people that are buried here, most notably, our Tribal leader Shaw Shaw Wabaunsee. He was born in 1817 and died in 1868. He signed the Treaty of 1855 which set aside six adjoining townships, right here in Isabella County, to establish the Isabella Indian Reservation... We are going to offer the sacred gift of spirit food for him and all students that perished while attending the boarding school.”

Live and back at the Zibiwing Center, Johnson read a poem for those perished students at MIIBS and in Canada. Then, Johnson and Isabelle Osawamick read each of the 227 names of students that perished at MIIBS, followed by drum beats after each name was read.

Johnson provided further remarks.

“Too often we shun decency and neglect the privilege of our birth right to live as the Creator intended,” Johnson said. “It is through love that we will prosper and only by direct confrontation will we find peace in our hearts again. Let us be brave as our contemptuous adversary becomes our friend to forgive. May kind nurturing pave the way. Never will we hold our children beneath our consideration, and by honoring them, we respect the sacred circle of life and reclaim it as our own. The spirit of the Anishinaabe people never left the students as they endured a new way of life and today that same spirit resounds with the promise that they’ll never be forgotten.”

The prerecorded video of Central Michigan University’s President Robert Davies was also aired. Davies spoke about the long-standing relationship between the Tribe and the CMU Chippewas.

“We are here today to acknowledge the injustice of the past and commit to building a brighter future,” Davies said in the recorded video. “Together, we can assure that distrust, prejudice, and supremacy will never again prevail over compassion, kindness and respect. The boarding school was a site of sadness... Today is important reminder of history that must never be forgotten and our shared purpose of moving forward together... We’re proud to continue to strengthen our partnership with the Saginaw Chippewa Indian Tribe of Michigan and its leaders – we do this through our classrooms, on our campus and in the community.”

Tribal Historic Preservation Officer Marcella Hadden discussed upcoming events regarding MIIBS.

Hadden also mentioned the ongoing issue of trespassers and vandals on the grounds. Hadden said a MIIBS neighbor watches the property and she discussed further security measures.

“(A portion of the MIIBS property is) fenced with barbed wire, we have lighting installed by Block Electric, we have a test camera up, a solar camera, and I want to thank Anthony Clark in the Surveillance Department who has gone above and beyond his scope of duty to help us in recommending solar cameras; having his team go out and install it,” Hadden said. “We were able to look at some photos of coverage and it’s so clear and... we saw some deer go by, we saw trespassers.”

Chief of Tribal Police Harry Ambs attends MIIBS meetings and the coverage on the cameras is handled by the Saginaw Chippewa Tribal Police.

“When Harry comes to our meetings, he lets us know when citations are issued,” Hadden said. “A couple weeks ago they apprehended, cited four youth that were in the tribal gym (within the MIIBS), so those four youth will be answering their citation in Bay City Federal Court.”

Observer photo

Dr. Mary S. Senter, professor of sociology for Central Michigan University, discusses the results of four different surveys of the MIIBS site.

Hadden said metal mesh is in the works to be put on the first floor of all the windows that are open and on all of the doors to help secure the grounds from trespassers and vandals.

Dr. Mary S. Senter, professor of sociology for Central Michigan University, discussed the four surveys completed about the MIIBS grounds, regarding what Tribal Members and the local community wish to do with the grounds and remaining buildings. The survey was supported by a 2018 Tribal Heritage Grant from the National Park Service.

The four surveys, Senter said, included: a June 2019 print survey for participants at the 2019 HHR event; a Spring 2020 web survey for CMU faculty, staff and select students; a Summer 2020/Spring 2021 web survey for Isabella County community members; and a Spring 2021 web survey with log on authentication for SCIT Members.

Keynote speaker Dr. Sarah Surface-Evans of CMU’s Archeological Field School presented information on the Asiinii Waa’kaa’igon (Stonehouse) near the MIIBS grounds. (See the front page for the full report.)

Keynote speaker Dr. Veronica Pasfield, journalist, researcher and tribal consultant, presented “Runaways, Smart Mouths & Heroes,” a PowerPoint presentation about generational trauma and documents, letters and student files from the boarding school era. (See page 13 for an article on the presentation.)

William Johnson and Marcella Hadden unveiled the plaque acknowledging the MIIBS was placed on the National Register of Historic Places with the United States Department of the Interior on Feb. 28, 2018. Johnson wished to thank the former Tribal Historic Preservation Officer Sarah Jones in making that possible.

A silent auction was held at the Zibiwing Center throughout the day.

The event concluded with an off-camera jingle dress healing dress on the MIIBS grounds.

Presenter shares letters, student records from boarding school era

NATALIE SHATTUCK

During this year's June 4 virtual Honoring, Healing & Remembering event recognizing the 87th anniversary of the Mt. Pleasant Indian Industrial Boarding School closing, the program featured several guest speakers.

Keynote speaker Dr. Veronica Pasfield, journalist, researcher and tribal consultant, presented "Runaways, Smart Mouths & Heroes" focusing on generational trauma, documented letters and student records from the boarding school era.

Pasfield's cousins, Paula Carrick and Wanda Perron, are tribal historic preservation officers for her tribe, Bay Mills Indian Community. With their stories of their family, Pasfield said they gave her "a path towards deeper understanding that took away a lot of pain and confusion" as they researched their relatives' past in boarding school.

"For myself, I wanted to understand how my immediate family went from our great-grandfather Shingabawossin, to a family that struggled so much," Pasfield said of the generational trauma that began from the boarding schools.

Pasfield shared letters, student records and images from the boarding school era. Many of the findings share an in-depth and personal story of the families affected by MIIBS.

Pasfield shared a story about her great-aunt Nora Greenbird. Nora's mother showed up at the school unannounced and attempted to retrieve 9-year-old Nora without prior authorization. The Mt. Pleasant archives also contained correspondence with MIIBS Superintendent R.A. Cochrane about allowing Nora to come home because her little brother was dying. Her family wanted Nora to see her brother before he passed away.

"Because of this letter... we discovered Lydia Greenbird had five children in five years and all five infants died while their sisters were away at school," Pasfield said. "So I really think of the profound sadness of that and the incredible resilience."

This, Pasfield said, helped her understand why her grandmother's mother never properly bonded with her grandmother. And, in turn, her grandmother had a hard time connecting with her own daughters and Pasfield said she and her mother always had problems bonding.

"I think about intergenerational trauma and the pain of that has somehow, for me, healed a little bit when I understand where it came from," Pasfield said. "I'm able to take it away from the personal stories and understand it is the effects of oppression through the Mt. Pleasant Boarding School and other federal Indian boarding schools."

Pasfield shared her grandmother's mother, Daisy Greenbird Smith, wrote MIIBS requesting to enroll her children, Connie and Donnie.

Daisy's husband left her and the kids and Daisy was working at Wigwam Restaurant in Royal Oak, Mich. where they did not allow Indian waitresses, Pasfield said. "But she did have a much lower-paying job in the kitchen. She felt she could not care for her children very well and applied to have them go to the Mt. Pleasant boarding school. Think about how painful that must have been for her."

"In a real sense, this was a fulfillment of the work of federal Indian boarding schools: wage labor, self-hatred, dispossession, an ancient culture now available for mainstream appropriation," Pasfield said.

Pasfield revealed details of more letters.

"There is another wonderful letter from a mother who really does take on Superintendent Cochran," she said. "(The letter) starts out really nicely; asking for her child to come home in the summer and her letters get increasingly more angry until finally, she said 'I'm going to talk to our Indian agent' and 'we'll see who owns them kids.' So, again, another piece of evidence found in the archive (which displays) the resistance of the families."

MIIBS survivor Floyd Genia, Pasfield said, was 9 years old when he "witnessed one of his friends in his classroom beaten to death by the teacher. They put that child in the ground that day."

"Floyd said he was really haunted his whole life wondering if that child's family found out what happened," Pasfield said.

The Wigwam Restaurant in Royal Oak, Mich. did not allow Indian waitresses.

Pasfield said it is "so important to understand the world histories told from elders."

"I really can't underestimate the power of the stories that are in our communities, even though those stories aren't taught in classrooms, in universities, but they matter," she said. "They matter for our families and they matter for other communities that are dealing with the same issues that we are."

Opioid Summit

“Over the years, you have seen the outreach and growth within the SCIT medical community. Both have come together in an amazing way to support individuals with a substance use disorder and watching and participating in that has been a privilege,” Poland said. “Isolation is a marker for worsening behavioral health symptoms of anxiety, depression, and substance use. I think one of the strengths of the Tribe is the sense of community and belonging that come with it, and are grounded in hundreds of years of rich traditions.”

Poland also asserts finding ways to support each other and reach out is so important with this pandemic.

“The summit brought together individuals from different sectors and different perspectives. We all learn more when we broaden our perception and open our minds to other people,” Poland said. “It was an honor to be involved in the summit and to continue to support the Tribe and its medical providers.”

Tribal Elder Cathy Matthews, project administrator for Healing to Wellness, has been a part of the Court since 2013 and appreciates the continuing effort the Tribe has made in fighting the war on drugs.

“I was happy to see Dr. Poland come in as a featured speaker and I find her very knowledgeable and personable with the SCIT community,” Matthews said. “I know in the past Tribal summits, we have heard speaker panels that featured judges who preside over drug courts and clients who have successfully completed those programs. It would be great to hear their testimonials.”

Matthews said it would be helpful to see an update from law enforcement officials and health care professionals relating to drug usage at the next summit (scheduled for June 7-8, 2022 at Soaring Eagle Entertainment Hall in Mt. Pleasant, Mich.).

“It’s not about just opioid use anymore, and I’m glad to hear we plan to meet in person next year to exchange best practices in fighting addiction,” Matthews said.

Maggie Magoon, MPH, Ph.D., said she is honored to serve as a planning committee member, and to collect data and provide evaluation results for the annual summit for the last three years.

“Evaluation results are intended to serve as a quality improvement measure,”

Magoon said. “The committee offering attendees CME credits along with having a virtual summit format provided unique data collection challenges. Feedback allows for the planning committee to tailor future summit offerings and provide quality educational resources to educators, providers, community members, and ultimately those experiencing opioid addiction and related issues.”

April Osburn, MSA, executive director of the Michigan Area Health Education Center, informs AHEC has been part of the planning committee for the past two conferences.

AHEC has partnered with the college for nine years on initiatives that support the college’s mission and providing educational opportunities to healthcare professionals, students, and community members and organizations.

“The Saginaw Chippewa Indian Tribe recognized a need and founded the concept of the Tribal Opioid Summit, which is dedicated to the principles of information, education, and expanding knowledge of the devastating impact of the opioid crisis on local native and non-native communities,” Osburn said. “The opportunity to sponsor such a large-scale conference dedicated to offering the latest in research, community development, healthcare, and tele-mental health resources was welcomed by the Mid Central AHEC and I’m honored to be involved in the planning process.”

SCIT Public Relations Director Frank Cloutier would like to thank summit committee chair Erik Rodriguez and Grants Specialist Brandon Schultz for their work along with all our corporate sponsors: Saginaw Chippewa Tribal Court and Judge Patrick Shannon; Alison Arnold of Central Michigan University: College of Medicine and Interdisciplinary Center for Community Health & Wellness; Joan Ford of CMU College of Medicine; April Osburn and Jennifer Morneau of Mid Central Area Health Education Regional Center; Dany Zimmel of Region V Public Health Training Center; Tribal Law & Policy Institute; Nimkee Memorial Wellness Center; and community members Lisa Hadden and Maggie Magoon.

the above-ground resources, buildings and building foundations and below-ground resources, such as the foundations and artifacts that are no longer visible,” Surface-Evans said. “We are utilizing geophysical prospection to help reduce the impact of the site and make sure our excavations target the areas that have the most potential.”

Central Michigan University and Saginaw Chippewa Tribal College students are conducting a joint field school.

“Over the six weeks of the field school, students learn archeological methods and participate in documenting the history of the site,” Surface-Evans said. “We are relying heavily on the knowledge and information the family can provide us about where buildings once stood and the various activities that took place in those buildings.”

The field school identified two areas to begin their work – first, the area around the Stonehouse itself and second, the space between the Stonehouse and the remains of a barn foundation.

“In the space between the house and the barn, we are conducting geophysical investigation using magnetic susceptibility,” Surface-Evans said. “This allows us to create heat maps that show hot spots where there may be artifacts or materials left behind. One of the reasons we are conducting this is to look for the remains of former buildings such as a granary and a chicken coop that once stood in the space between the house and barn.”

In addition to the geophysical methods, the field school will also collect information through small shovel tests dug in a grid across the site, according to Surface-Evans.

“These provide a small glimpse below the ground to collect artifacts that relate to the site and how it was used through time. For example, in the area near the granary, we are finding the vessels that once held food – such as crocks and canning jars... There are also plenty of artifacts that tell us this was a working farm (horseshoes and hay rake dating from 1890s that would have been pulled by horses).”

CMU and Saginaw Chippewa Tribal College students in the joint field school explore the site of the Asinii Waa'kaa'igan (Stonehouse).

Several small objects have also been discovered, including small clay and glass marbles, toy cars and toy soldiers.

“We plan to continue geophysical survey and expand our study area to other locations on the property,” Surface-Evans said. “We also plan to excavate a sample near the granary and barn hoping to find some artifacts that will definitely link the homestead with MIIBS. After that, we have the analysis of all this data and artifacts using this information to begin drafting a nomination for the National Register of Historic Places.”

Surface-Evans wished to express gratitude to the Pego-Pelcher family for allowing the field school to conduct this work, SCIT, the Ziibiwing Center and its staff, Tribal Historic Preservation Officer Marcella Hadden, SCTC and Dr. Adam Haviland and the SCTC and CMU field school students.

Isabella County Parks receives funding for Chippewa River Erosion and Canoe Launch Project

ISABELLA COUNTY PARKS & RECREATION STAFF

The Isabella County Parks and Recreation Commission manages eight county parks, three of which are located along the Chippewa River – Deerfield Nature Park, Majeske Landing and Meridian Park.

Due to increased use, high water and other water conditions, several spans of riverbank located throughout these parks have erosion problem areas that require stabilization.

Working to improve these areas to prevent future embankment issues is the goal of the Chippewa River Erosion and Canoe Launch Project, which is scheduled to be completed in Fall 2021.

In Deerfield Nature Park, the project will improve/rebuild two current canoe launches, add one new canoe launch, correct a high-water issue, and take steps to repair a large section of eroded riverbank. The project also includes improvements at the Majeske Landing launch area.

Funding for this project was made possible by the generous support of the Saginaw Chippewa Indian Tribe through 2 percent revenue sharing distributions, the Mt. Pleasant Area Convention and Visitors Bureau, and the Conservation Fund, and the 12 foundations and corporations that make up the Funders Network of the Saginaw Bay Watershed Initiative Network (WIN).

The Isabella County Parks and Recreation staff is grateful for the support of these great community and regional partners.

Eagle Spirit Awards honor 2021 Tribal graduates, feature author Angeline Bouley

NATALIE SHATTUCK

Editor

The 2021 Higher Education's Eagle Spirit Award Banquet honored 2021 Tribal graduates and had a surprise guest as a keynote speaker – Angeline Bouley, author of the bestselling book “Firekeeper’s Daughter.”

The banquet began at 6 p.m. at the venue for Soaring Eagle’s outdoor summer concert series.

Bouley, an enrolled member of the Sault Ste. Marie Tribe of Chippewa Indians, told the graduates, their families and friends about her journey to, eventually, writing a bestseller.

“We come from storytellers,” Bouley said of Ojibwe culture. “Story is how we learn what it means to be Anishinaabe; it connects us to our ancestors and it connects us to those future generations that haven’t even been born yet. I tell stories now for a living, but that wasn’t what I had planned.”

Bouley discussed heading to Mount Pleasant, to attend Central Michigan University at 18, the first person in her family to attend college. She thought she wanted to study anatomy but a course proved her otherwise. She eventually began working in education and at West Intermediate in Mount Pleasant and became the Tribal education director for the Saginaw Chippewa Indian Tribe. Meanwhile, she would always go back to an idea she had for a story.

The original idea for “Firekeeper’s Daughter” came to Bouley when she was 18. Her friend wanted to introduce her to a new guy at school to possibly date. Later, there was a large drug bust at the school and the guy she was never introduced to turned out to be an undercover officer.

“I remembered thinking, ‘what if our paths had crossed?’” Bouley said. “And because I was a dreamy-eyed romantic, I thought, ‘what if we had liked each other?’ And then this spark of an idea stayed with me and it was ‘what if it wasn’t that he liked me but that he needed my help,’ and I thought, ‘why would some undercover investigation need the help of an ordinary Ojibwe girl?’ I went about my life, went to college.”

Bouley continued, “That spark of an idea I had of an undercover investigation, I thought what if it was a thriller? What if it was on a reservation? What if it was a federal officer? What if there were reasons compelling her (the character) to help, but then to realize that helping to protect her community and helping this investigation were two very different things. The story took on less of thriller angle and more of a search for identity and place in community, dealing with a grief and loss and justice: who gets it and who doesn’t.”

Bouley said like most, her life and career have been full of many ups and downs.

“At one of my darkest times, I did my first fast,” Bouley said. “My dad was the firekeeper and it was pretty rough. But when I went to that fire, and put my tobacco down, this mantra came to me: ‘I am worthy.’ My worth was inherent; it wasn’t based on my accomplishments. It wasn’t based on anything physical. It was inherent because Creator made me and that makes me worthy. My second mantra was ‘I will survive this’ because I am more than my mistakes, and I come from people who survive.”

My third mantra was ‘there is beauty and joy in this world still.’ And that was when I started writing,” Bouley said. “I would write, I would try to find three things each day that would bring me joy or made smile and it couldn’t be a work-related thing because, up to that point, my whole identity had been based on what I did, what I accomplished and that hadn’t brought me the happiness I always thought it would.”

At 44 years old, Bouley decided to try writing the story that had been in her mind since she was 18.

“I’m here today to tell you that you can rewrite your story,” Bouley said, stating her career path took many twists and turns. “Never stop revising your story because the world is a better place with you and whatever story you choose to tell.”

Guadalupe Gonzalez, project coordinator for the Tribal College’s Extension office, was also a keynote speaker.

Gonzalez told the graduates about her academic journey.

“I graduated from high school with a 1.9 GPA and, with that, I started out at the Tribal College. After that, I had the audacity to apply to a Big 10 university and they actually let me in,” Gonzalez said. “I graduated with a bachelor’s degree in English from Michigan State University. My experience there was one of the best times of my life. So much so that I’m going back for more this fall as I’ve just been accepted into a master’s program there.”

Gonzalez told the graduates, “You all are the future of the Tribe, the future leaders, and I encourage all of you to have that same type of audacity in your future goals. Don’t let anybody tell you that you can’t do it. You are living proof that it is possible.”

“Getting a college degree is something that I will never regret, never forget and always have. That’s something that nobody can ever take away from me,” Gonzalez said.

Tribal Education’s Renata Borton, Marta Heslip, Kari Noack and Olivia Manito-wabi-McCullough presented the graduates with their certificates and awards.

The Saginaw Chippewa Academy’s AB staff performed an honor song and the host, Judy Pamp’s, remarks ended the presentation.

Attendees were then invited to grab a to-go meal, provided by the Soaring Eagle Food & Beverage Department, and a book signing opportunity with Bouley.

“Each and every one of you are here because your dreams are obtainable,” said Judy Pamp, event host and community project manager for the Education department, to the 2021 graduates.

Tribe receives $60,000 grant from Michigan Department of Education

NATALIE SHATTUCK

Editor

The Saginaw Chippewa Indian Tribe and its Tribal Education Department was one of 44 grantees selected by the Michigan Department of Education (MDE) to develop new opportunities for students in grades 6-12 to explore education professions.

“The Future Proud Michigan Explore program is an important element of MDE’s larger Proud Michigan Educator campaign, and a continuation of Michigan’s efforts to grow and diversify the educator workforce. The Explore program is a companion to existing career and technical education 9-12 cadet teacher programs,” stated a release from the MDE.

Each of the 44 grantees are set to receive federal Title IIA funding to build implementation teams, provide student engagement activities, and plan for hands-on learning through Explore courses in the 2021-22 academic years.

An April 28 Tribal Council motion was approved to accept the award from the MDE in the amount of $60,000. This grant will facilitate support for Tribal Members interested in pursuing a pathway towards teacher certification/education or education administration.

The $60,000 total breaks down to $10,000 per school the Tribe is involved with, to develop a plan for a pathway for Native American youth into the field of education to help diversify the educator workforce in the local community.

“To accomplish this, the SCIT Education Department will be collaborating with Central Michigan University along with Shepherd Public Middle School and High School, Mt. Pleasant Middle School and High School, and the OASIS and Way programs,” said Niki Henry, curriculum and instructional coordinator for Tribal Education Administration. “We will also be collaborating with SCIT youth as well as community members to create an inclusive, culturally-sustaining, and equity-focused program that will lead Indigenous youth into future classrooms as educational professionals and enable them to positively change the educational experiences of SCIT youth on a grand scale.”

According to Henry, “The grant will also provide increased opportunities for Indigenous high school students to earn college credits through courses designed to interest and empower them as potential Future Proud Michigan educators.”

This is the beginning of an ongoing project that Henry is helping pioneer in collaboration with Amy Ford Carpenter from Central Michigan University’s teacher prep program.

“Amy and I met several times this winter to create a vision and brainstorm the preliminary structure of the Future Michigan Proud Educator program that this first stage of grant funding will allow us to further develop,” Henry said. “Together, we designed the grant proposal as a partnership between the SCIT Education Department and CMU’s Educator Preparation Program with the support of Melissa Isaac, director of Tribal Education, the SCIT grant writing team, and Paula Lancaster, dean of the College of Education and Human Services.”

According to Henry, other implementation team members with key roles in developing the program include Jillian Davidson, director of the CMU Center for Clinical Experiences and Shannon Ebner-Buning with the CMU Center for Student Services.”

“Grant activities will support the design of 1) a clinically-focused high school-level course taken for CMU college credit and 2) exploratory engagement activities beginning in sixth grade,” Henry said. “These activities will afford SCIT youth opportunities for leadership and professional growth on a career path in education with culturally-specific engagement activities that cultivate generational connections and investment in the Tribal community.”

These activities align with the vision of the Saginaw Chippewa Tribal College: “Committed to expanding educational opportunities in a nurturing environment that embraces and integrates the cultural uniqueness of the Anishinaabek.”

“The activities also align with the goals of Project AWARE, SCIT’s federally-funded local initiative that promotes culturally-responsive, trauma-informed practices in Mount Pleasant and Shepherd schools,” Henry said. “Project AWARE’s professional development can inform FPME programming, which must attend to the developmental needs of adolescents, cultural identity, and mental health. Human interactions and relationships are at the heart of the engagement activities.”

Higher education student spotlight: Sydnee Kopke

OLIVIA MANITOWABI-MCCULLOUGH

Post-Secondary Support Specialist

Sydnee Kopke is a student in the Saginaw Chippewa Tribal Scholarship program and a previous student in the Leadership Apprentice Program.

Sydnee graduated with her high school diploma from Mount Pleasant High School in 2015 and received an associate degree in business from the Saginaw Chippewa Tribal College in 2019. Sydnee is currently continuing her education at Michigan State University.

Recently, Sydnee was able to advance her career from a leadership apprentice position to Human Resources generalist for the Saginaw Chippewa Indian Tribe and Soaring Eagle Gaming entities.

When referring to her leadership apprentice position, Sydnee said, “It has given me the opportunity to advance in my career by holding degrees. My schooling also has helped me get into this career because of an opportunity that the Tribe provides. The Leadership Apprentice program is for Tribal Member college students who are enrolled full-time. It allows you to be placed in any department throughout the organization and give you hands-on experience alongside your education experience.”

The one thing that Sydnee would like to say to young Tribal Members about higher education would be, “Not all learning takes place in the classroom and it is okay to take more than four years to finish a program. It’s okay to start late or take a break that’s longer than usual. Just keeping trying. Not everyone’s success looks the same – as long as you are proud of yourself that is all that matters. Get your education for yourself and future generations. And take advantage of all the Tribal programs we have! We have so many programs designed to help guide our success, yet they are not utilized as much as they should be. Don’t be afraid to reach out and ask for help.”

In the future, Sydnee sees herself in a HR position within the Tribe to help keep personnel happy and employed. She also sees herself advocating for the Tribal Membership to get positions within the organization and helping others with their journeys to where they want to be.

“I think our workforce is very important to our Tribe’s success and we need dedicated and loyal people... Who is more loyal and dedicated than our Members?” she said.

Editorial: Project Venture makes cedar garden beds for Andahwod elders

DOLORES WINN

Youth Program Coordinator,
Anishnaabeg Child
& Family Services

The Project Venture Tribal youth program worked hard this summer during the entire month of June to help build raised cedar garden beds for the elders at Andahwod.

Students displayed great team working and problem-solving skills during the building and set up of the garden beds. We met each week at Andahwod and the students made a plan of how they were going to put the boxes together.

A few staff from Anishnaabeg Child & Family Services helped us, along with our volunteer Aaron Hernandez.

Once the garden beds were complete, we purchased some beautiful flowers the elders had asked for. Project Venture students planted all of the flowers in the cedar garden beds and learned how to place the flowers and plant them so they will grow throughout the year.

The students will also help maintain and water these garden beds each week and help the elders with their new flowerbeds.

This project was also a very great experience for the youth and helping to build relationships between the youth and elders. Project Venture students will continue to come back and meet with the elders and get teachings from the elders on the medicinal purposes of some of the plants.

This was one of the many beautiful community service ethics projects that Project Venture students have done so far. The next project will be planting butterfly gardens at the Ziibiwing Cultural Center this summer. Stay tuned for more details!

Remembering the 215 Indigenous children found in unmarked graves at Canadian Residential School

LEVI RICKERT

Native News Online

(Editor's note: The following article comes from Native News Online and was published May 31, 2021.)

KAMLOOPS, B.C., Canada — As people in the United States spent time last month to remember those who gave their lives for their country while serving in the U.S. military, on Memorial Day, First Nations people and Native Americans across Indian Country paid tribute to the loss of 215 children, whose remains were recently discovered at the site of a former residential school near the town of Kamloops, British Columbia, Canada.

A Tk'emlúps te Secwépemc Nation (Kamloops Indian Band) news release in May 2021 revealed the horrifying news that the remains of 215 children, some as young as 3 years old, were uncovered at the Kamloops Indian Residential School.

The residential school was operated by the Catholic Church until 1969. The residential school system, similar to Indian boarding school system in the United States, forcibly removed Indigenous children from their families. The goal was to strip children of their Indigenous cultures and even Christianize them.

“We had a knowing in our community that we were able to verify. At this time, we have more questions than answers,” Tk'emlúps te Secwépemc Chief Rosanne Casimer said in the news release.

The Kamloops Residential School was closed 1969. The remains of 215 Indigenous students were discovered by radar recently.

The Kamloops Residential School was closed 1969. The remains of 215 Indigenous students were discovered by radar recently.

The remains were discovered through ground-penetrating radar administered by a specialist hired by the First Nation. The Tk'emlúps te Secwépemc language and culture department oversaw the work so that the project was conducted in a culturally appropriate and respectful fashion.

“To our knowledge, these missing children are undocumented deaths,” Casimer said in the statement. “We sought out a way to confirm that knowing out of deepest respect and love for those lost children and their families, understanding that Tk'emlúps te Secwépemc Nation is the final resting place of these children.”

On May 30, Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau ordered flags to be flown at half-mast at federal buildings across Canada.

“To honor the 215 children whose lives were taken at the former Kamloops residential school and all Indigenous children who never made it home, the survivors, and their families, I have asked that the Peace Tower and all federal buildings be flown at half-mast,” Trudeau tweeted.

The Tk'emlúps te Secwépemc Nation said it will work with the coroner and reach out to the home communities of the children who attended the residential school. It is hopeful that the Nation will have preliminary findings soon.

NATALIE SHATTUCK

After 14 long-awaited months, live music is back! The Soaring Eagle Casino & Resort kicked off its first concert of the outdoor summer concert series with country music superstar Luke Bryan during the May 29 sold-out show.

Country music superstar Luke Bryan kicks off the return of Soaring Eagle's summer outdoor concert series on May 29.

Shortly after 9:15 p.m. that Saturday, the artist's band entered the stage and Luke Bryan walked out with an XL margarita in his hand to kick his show off with his song "One Margarita." He held the drink for a few seconds and eventually gave it away to a fan in the front row.

Bryan continued with his hits "Rain Is a Good Thing," "That's My Kind of Night," "Knockin' Boots" and "What Makes You Country."

"This is the first time playing in a year and a half," Bryan said with a huge grin on his face.

After the pause on live performances, it was clear Bryan was thrilled and gained energy off of the audience.

Bryan sailed, danced, and shook right through performances of "Huntin, Fishin and Lovin Every Day," "Kick the Dust Up," "Waves," "Down to One," "What She Wants," "Crash My Party," "Roller Coaster," "Strip It Down," "Drink a Beer," "Sunrise, Sunburn, Sunset" and "Move."

Bryan ended his show with "Play it Again," "Country Girl" and "Night to End."

Morgan Evans, Bryan's opening act, took to the stage shortly after 8 p.m.

"This is the first time I've played to a live crowd in over a year," Evans shouted through his excitement as the audience hooted and hollered back.

Evans is married to country artist Kelsea Ballerini and is best known for his songs including "Kiss Somebody," "Day Drunk" and "Young Again."

The Soaring Eagle Casino & Resort continues its outdoor concerts with ZZ Top, John Fogerty and George Thorogood up next on July 17.

Meritain Health expands Medicare-Like-Rates (MLR) Program

MERITAIN HEALTH

Dear Tribal Member,

We are excited to expand our current Medicare-Like-Rates (MLR) Program. This will include physician and other health care professional services and non-hospital-based services as claims eligible for payment based on the applicable MLR fee schedule effective July 1, 2021.

You may already be familiar with the MLR Program as it was implemented more than a year ago for eligible hospital claims. This expansion to include non-hospital-based services means the payment made by the health plan will be accepted by providers as payment in full.

Expanding this program can result in tremendous savings to the tribal health care program, freeing up additional resources to expand care for Tribal Members. It will also help extend resources for continuing to offer affordable benefit coverage.

We are also continuing our partnership with Shasta administrative services to provide MLRs for all eligible claims incurred by our Tribal Members who are also eligible for purchased/referred care services and have approval from Purchase Referred Care (PCR) for designated services.

Some facilities or providers in your area may not be familiar with the MLR program for Tribal Members. Should you receive a bill for charges that should have been paid by the MLR program, please contact Meritain Health® right away.

The Meritain Health Customer Service team will contact the provider and take care of the issue for you. After they explain the program and the federal regulations, the provider should understand and accept the Tribe's reimbursement as payment in full.

If a claim is processed with MLR, you should not be balance billed. However, in the event you do receive a balance bill, please contact Meritain Health to verify if the balance owed is accurate.

All claims and customer service will still be handled by Meritain Health. You can contact Meritain Health Customer Service at 1.800.925.2272, from 7 A.M. to 8 P.M. (CT) with any questions you may have, or if you receive medical bills you do not think you should be paying.

Isabella County Central Dispatch proposition for renewal of 9-1-1 System Funding

MARGARET A. MCAVOY

County Administrator
Controller for Isabella County

In 2016, Isabella County voters approved the Isabella County Central Dispatch Surcharge for 9-1-1 System Funding which provided funding exclusively for 9-1-1 emergency telephone call answering and dispatch services within Isabella County, including facilities, equipment, maintenance, and operating costs.

Voters' support has provided crucial operational support and has improved the infrastructure and capacity for emergency communications to keep the residents, public safety officers and visitors of Isabella County safe.

Listed are just a few things Isabella County 9-1-1 has been able to do with the Isabella County Central Dispatch Surcharge:

- More than 282,000 calls were taken by eight full-time Isabella County Dispatchers since 2017

- Next Generation 9-1-1 replaced the 24-year-old call intake system and increased efficiency in taking emergency calls.

- Smart911 allows citizens the opportunity to provide additional details that 911 dispatchers can use to assist with emergencies

- Text to 9-1-1 gives citizens the option to text emergency information to 911 dispatchers which directly impacts people with communication impairments, domestic violence victims, and people who are in situations where talking on the phone is not an option.

On Tuesday, Aug. 3, 2021, the Isabella County Central Dispatch Proposition for Renewal of 9-1-1- System Funding will be in front of Isabella County voters for a renewal. This Renewal is NOT an increase request; but it will provide for the continual operational funding crucially needed for Isabella County 9-1-1.

Don't forget to vote on Tuesday, Aug. 3, 2021.

Isabella County Central Dispatch is committed to providing an effective telecommunications link between citizens and emergency personnel. Its duty is to identify emergency situations and promptly refer them to their appropriate emergency services.

Set aside your device, spend sacred time with your child

INTER-TRIBAL COUNCIL OF MICHIGAN

Childhood is Sacred, a multi-tribe awareness campaign, is dedicated to putting children first through education and activities that support healthy child growth and development and nurturing community relationships.

The campaign started in April 2021 as part of the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) Linking Actions for Unmet Needs in Children's Health (LAUNCH) project being led by Tribes in Michigan's Upper Peninsula and the Inter-Tribal Council of Michigan.

The campaign acknowledges the Anishinaabe belief that children are a gift from creation. Each child is born with a gift and purpose that supports community. It is our job as caretakers, parents, and community members to ensure that every child blossoms and their gifts are realized.

Everyone experiences hardships and challenges in life. As parents and caretakers, there are days we feel exhausted and desperate for a break. You and your child(ren) can learn to beat these challenges by setting aside "Sacred Time." Sacred Time is the quality moments you intentionally set aside with your child(ren) to Be Active, Be Playful, and Be True. These are moments away from digital devices without judgement.

Children are sponges for learning and powerful teachers.

For adults, spending time with a child is an opportunity to be youthful and see the world in a different way. It is special to be able to get on a child's level and see how they look at and move through the world. We find new solutions when we understand how they think; and we are more compassionate when we know how they feel.

Tribes in Michigan participating in the Childhood is Sacred project are the Hannahville

Indian Community, Keweenaw Bay Indian Community, Lac Vieux Desert Band of Lake Superior Chippewa Indians, and Sault Ste. Marie Tribe of Chippewa Indians.

Annual Human Race brings new route, heat format to this year's event

NATALIE SHATTUCK

Editor

The 29th annual Human Race, a 5K run or one-mile fun run, was held on Wednesday, June 16 outside of the Seventh Generation Elijah Elk Center's main entrance.

Some changes were made to this year's event: a new race route and a heat format of about 25 racers taking off each hour from 3 to 7 p.m.

The 5K route began at the front doors of the Elijah Elk Center to the Seventh Generation Powwow grounds to the bridge, through the new walking paths by the Saginaw Chippewa Academy, around the Tribal Gym and return to the starting line.

"Our participants were grateful that we hosted the event and appreciated the structure of the event," said Jaden Harman, organizer for the race and fitness coordinator at Nimkee. "This event is a local favorite and it was nice to offer this event again to our community."

Hand-crafted cedar eagle feather awards were given to the top three male and female finishers in 13 different age classifications in the 5K run and top three one-mile finishers.

Stephen Merchant with a time of 16:21," Harman said. More than 100 racers participated in this year's event.

All competitors received an event T-shirt and a to-go dinner. "Miigwetch to the 7th

Editorial: My experience with gaslighting

DIANE PAVLAT

StrongHearts Native Helpline

I was pregnant with our first child when I drove him to the doctor's office. He said that he broke his ankle when he jumped down from the back of his truck and rolled his foot.

The nurse came in and examined his ankle. She explained that the break likely occurred when the other man in the altercation kicked him. Tears rushing to my eyes, the nurse looked at me and said, "Don't worry, he's going to be fine."

My tears were not for his well-being and he knew it. They were for the instant betrayal I felt when I realized he had lied to me. Little did I know the extent to which his lies would permeate every aspect of our lives.

What is gaslighting?

A common technique of abusers, dictators, narcissists and cult leaders alike, "gaslighting" is an abuse tactic in which a person gains power by making a victim question reality. Abusers refuse responsibility for any wrongdoing and instead blame their victim. It is often difficult for victims to recognize the abuse.

ADHD and gaslighting

I live with ADHD or Attention Deficit Hyperactive Disorder which is a neurodevelopmental disorder that causes the person to have trouble paying attention (to details) and controlling impulsive behaviors like shopping. A person with ADHD often forgets or loses things. They have a hard time resisting temptation and tend to take unnecessary risks. I've learned, these traits are exploitable.

According to Dr. Stephanie Sarkis, people suffering this disorder are especially vulnerable to a person with a narcissistic personality - one who tends to be selfish with a sense of entitlement. A narcissist has an inflated ego with a deep need for attention and admiration. Sarkis describes the gaslighter as a constant liar and master of deception. They deny wrongdoing and use what is near and dear to you as ammunition.

In my case, my abuser became excessively jealous of our son. He treated him poorly and at times, put him in harm's way. He did it to spite me, to scare me and to show me that in his household, he was in control.

He even admitted when our son was just six months old that he was starting to hate him because I loved him so much. He said it was unfair that his own mother didn't love him like I loved our son. At the time, I was busy being a mom and didn't see it as a manipulation meant to garner my attention.

They called me crazy

Gaslighters are masters at manipulation and finding the people they know will stand by them no matter what, such as a parent. They turn people against you. You may start to doubt who to trust and that's exactly what the gaslighter wants because isolating you gives them more control.

They tell you and/or others that you are crazy. This is one of the most effective tools of the gaslighter. The gaslighter knows if they question your sanity, people will not believe you when you tell them the gaslighter is abusive. I didn't know that his family called me, "Crazy," but in retrospect, it was crazy to love a man who could in one breath make me feel like no else mattered and, in the next, like I wasn't worth a dime. (Read more about Projecting and Cheating, Love Bombing and Devaluing in the full story at strongheartshelpline.org)

Food for the soul and recovery

Over time, a victim of gaslighting may start to believe that they cannot trust themselves, or that they have a mental health disorder. They may have anxiety, depression, isolation, confusion and psychological trauma. The long-term impact on someone's mental health and self-esteem is often devastating but there are ways to cope.

Recovering from gaslighting takes time. Victims should never blame themselves. You are not responsible for the abusive behavior.

For me, my healing takes place when I travel to distant places and see beautiful things. I call it food for the soul. I find peace in my visits to the Redwoods in northern California. The trees have lived for more than a thousand years. My ancestors — who were once free to roam the continent — saw these very same trees. I feel whole when standing among the Redwoods of Stout Grove.

Find food for your soul. Practice listening to your thoughts, feelings. Learn to trust your instincts again. To read the full story, visit StrongHearts Native Helpline's website at strongheartshelpline.org. Advocates are available 24/7 to chat online or call/text 1-844-7NATIVE (762-8483).

COVID-19 protocol for Tribal Operations repealed

PUBLIC RELATIONS
DEPT.

Tribal Council, working closely with Nimkee Public Health and Tribal Administration, has taken considerable time to review safety protocols while using the Centers for Disease Control

(CDC) guidelines in determining changes to your restrictions and protocols regarding COVID-19.

At this time, it has been determined by the leadership that all restrictions and limitations are now lifted (as of 5 p.m. on June 22), with continued monitoring for changes and trends in the future.

Human Services departments will continue with CDC standards as a precautionary measure. Those departments are Nimkee Health, ACFS (aka Social Services), Behavioral Health and Andahwod.

During the entire pandemic, the Tribal Council has enlisted the assistance of our health professionals in determining next steps to ensure our nation and its people remain safe and secure.

The CDC standards are federal standards that provide guidance and best practices for leadership to rely on during such challenging times.

It is understood there may be apprehension to discontinue wearing masks and/or face coverings. It is perfectly fine to continue practicing safety protocols you have become accustomed to as we return to our new normal.

Kildee applauds inclusion of tribal health program in President's budget

New budget would ensure uninterrupted health care for Indian Country through the Indian Health Service

THE OFFICE OF REP. DAN
KILDEE (D-MI)

FLINT, Mich. — Congressman Kildee (MI-05), chief deputy whip of the House Democratic Caucus and member of the House Budget Committee, today applauded the Biden administration for including Indian Health Service (IHS) funding in his fiscal year 2022 budget in a way that would not interrupt health care for Indian Country.

IHS, an agency within the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, is responsible for providing health care services to members of federally-recognized Native American tribes. However, IHS is treated differently from other federal health programs, which has caused interruptions in health care for Native Americans.

Currently, other federal health programs, including the Veterans Affairs (VA) program, are “pre-funded” — meaning that their federal funding is guaranteed even in the event of a government shutdown or agency standstill.

Kildee, a member of the House Budget Committee, for years has fought for parity so that IHS is treated the same way as other federal health programs.

“The federal government has a trust responsibility to ensure uninterrupted health care access for Indian Country,” Congressman Kildee said.

“Under current law, the Indian Health Service is treated differently than other federal health programs like the VA. This unequal treatment means that access to health care is at risk in the event of a government shutdown. As a member of the House Budget Committee, I have been working toward parity between IHS and other federal health programs, and I thank President Biden for including this initiative in his annual budget.”

As a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, Kildee has also worked to ensure parity for tribal governments when it comes to other aspects of the federal government. Under his leadership, the Ways and Means Committee held its first-ever hearing on the impact of the tax code on Indian nations.

Congressman Kildee represents the Saginaw Chippewa Indian Tribe in Michigan.

Deconstructing the myths about victims

STRONGHEARTS NATIVE HELPLINE

Historical bias:

The oppressive nature of European ideas about civilized societies, acceptable cultural practices and religious beliefs accompanied the colonizers to the “New World” in the 16th century.

Native peoples felt the immediate brunt of racial discrimination, which continues today. Those who were not “white” were seen as dirty, savage and unworthy of justice. These biases and misconceptions permeate the legal system and when it comes to evidence of innocence and guilt — prosecutors use a filtration system seemingly dictated by the media.

The myth of the perfect victim:

The “perfect or ideal victim” narrative is a widespread phenomenon that not only potentially prevents a victim from reporting assaults, it almost always ensures that a defense attorney will use appearance, behavior and reputation to refute a criminal case in a court of law. Unfortunately, the media often portrays the perfect victim as a Snow White fairytale innocent.

According to Jason B. Whiting, Ph.D., LMFT, whose research delves into deception, communication and abuse in relationships, the “ideal victim” profile consists of five traits in which the victim must be:

- weak/vulnerable
- involved in a respectable activity at the time of victimization
- blameless in all aspects of the interaction
- victimized by an obvious offender
- someone who doesn't know the offender

These socially accepted victim traits may contribute to why male victims are less likely to report an assault; and these assumptions often result in victims and perpetrators being painted with a very narrow brush involving social biases about age, gender, sexual orientation, social class and race.

The unseen victim:

This “perfect victim” could be a contributing factor as to why the judicial system ignores the Missing and Murdered Indigenous Relatives crisis that has plagued Native communities.

We know from years of generational trauma that Native peoples are often ignored because they are not portrayed as victims of colonization and oppression. In stark contrast, the media often portrays Native Americans as lazy, drunk or looking for a handout. Not only are the stories of Native Americans more likely to be questioned and/or doubted — they are easily forgotten.

The myth that only women can be abused

Media and socialization may lead you to believe that only women can be abused but the truth is anyone can be a victim of domestic violence.

National Institute of Justice statistics show that there is an increased rate of violence among intimate partners in Indian Country including: one in three men has endured physical violence by an intimate partner and nearly three in four men have experienced psychological aggression by an intimate partner and one in four men has experienced sexual violence.

When it comes to domestic, dating and sexual violence, men who reported abuse indicated that were they sexually assaulted both as a child and as an adult and that they continue to struggle with intimate partner violence as victims and/or perpetrators.

StrongHearts Native Helpline can help

The reality is that physical abuse is almost always accompanied by other types of abuse. Abuse is not okay and it's not okay to live in fear. If you think you are being abused, StrongHearts can help.

StrongHearts advocates take a Native-centered, empowerment-based approach to every contact. Services are completely free, anonymous and confidential. Call or text 1-844-7NATIVE (762-8483) or visit StrongHearts online at strongheartshelpline.org for one-on-one chat advocacy 24/7.
